

MiBodega.com

This application will help you to manage your storage units. You will be able to mark your boxes and add information of what is inside the boxes.

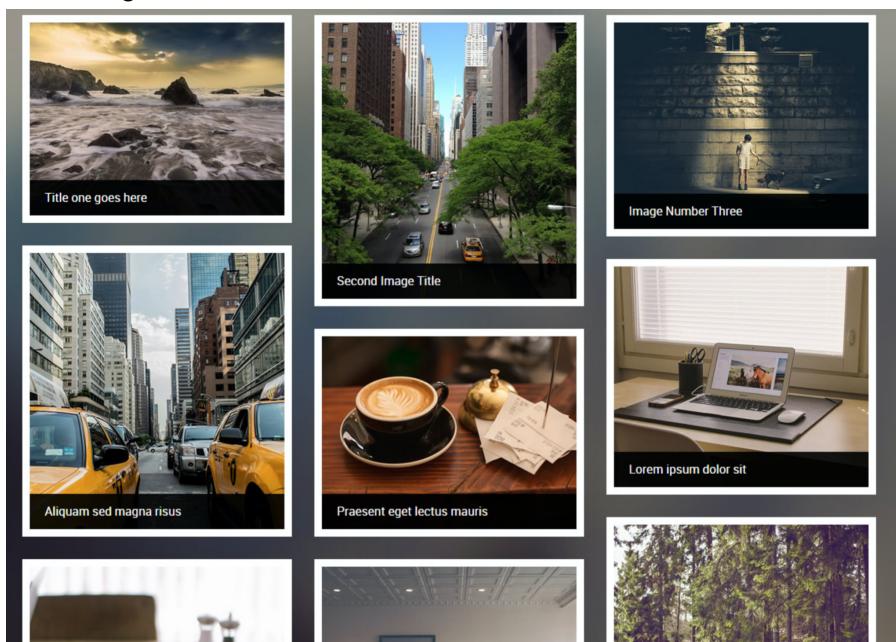

As an unregistered user, I should be able to create my account. When creating my account I should be able to add my account name, email, password and my credit card details. We will use stripe as a payment gateway <https://stripe.com> (use it in test mode). A user might have more than one account and an account might have multiple users, but only the account creator (administrator) should have permissions to update credit card information, see billing and invite users. There should be 3 plans: free, moderate and unlimited.

As a user I should be able to log in. If a user has more than one account, the user should be asked which account he is going to work with. Changing accounts should be possible any time. Keep in mind that not all the accounts have the same permissions

As an admin user, I should be able to invite users to my account.

As a user I should be able to create a new box. When creating a new box, you will only add a name and add items. Each item you can add a description and a picture of the item, each box has many items and one item belongs to a box.

As a user I should be able to see what is inside of a box. As a reference you should see something like this:

As a User I should be able to move items from one box to another or mark an object as “in use”, that means that this item still belongs to this box but you are using it right now.

As a user I should be able to see the qr code of a box. Each box should have a qr code with a link directly to box information, so if I use my cell I should be able to scan the code and get to the box show route.

As a free user I should be able to only create one box. As a moderate user I should be able to create 5 boxes and unlimited as the name suggests I should be able to create as many as I want.

As an admin user, I should be able to see the billing information, I can see each month and how much I was charged in a particular month.